Abstract

There is no shortage of case studies available to share learnings from catastrophic incidents across many industrial sectors, because we do not seem to be applying the learnings, and previous errors are repeated. The IChemE Safety Centre has developed an innovative real life case study experience by placing you in the situation and lead up to an incident. In this workshop you will be immersed in the context of what was driving decisions, and then have the opportunity to make the decisions yourself. Audience feedback on this information as well as participation will be guided via mobile phone technology.
